Ruby Au, Marshall School of Business and Dornsife College of Letters, Arts & Gorda & Placencia, Belize; Beijing & Shanghai, China; Koror, Palau; Embera, Panama; Punta Cape Town, South Africa
Langa Quarter: Social Enterprise Development in Post-Apartheid Cape Town

A two-part project including a pitch deck explaining to visitors and investors the Langa Quarter Homestay Hotel, an effort to economically develop Langatownship by empowering residents to launch homestay business franchises, and a business –training framework for residents who wanted to become franchisees.

Brandon Cheung, Dornsife College of Letters, Arts & Sciences & Sol Price School of Public Policy
Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia; Singapore; Taipei, Taiwan
The Future of US Strategic Engagement in Southeast Asia

An in-depth analysis of the United States’ engagement in Southeast Asia since President Obama’s “pivot” to the Asia-Pacific five years ago, including recommendations for how the U.S. can preserve its central role in the region as a force of political and economic stability.

Gabrielle (Gabby) Colvert, Viterbi School of Engineering
Oxford, England; Dublin, Ireland
Brains Abroad: Applying Engineering Principles to the Study of Neurological Disorders in a Global Context

A summary of two research experiences that applied engineering principles to neurological disorders including adult Dystonia and the impact of malnutrition on children’s brain development.

Madeleine Heller, Dornsife College of Letters, Arts & Sciences
Cape Town, South Africa
The Vaginal Microbiome of South African Adolescent Women at the Species-Level

A research project to identify bacterial species present in the genital tracts of adolescent women from an informal settlement outside of Cape Town, South Africa.

Proanne (Proey) Liao, School of Architecture
Beijing & Shanghai, China; Tokyo, Japan
Marginal Urbanism

An architectural portfolio detailing how the built environment in Asian cities affects the social, economic, and political landscape, and advocating for a design approach that uses the built environment to alleviate concerns that are otherwise pushed to the margins.
Kirstin Louie, Dornsife College of Letters, Arts & Sciences
Beijing, China; London, England
Pingyao: The Ancient City As It Stands Today

A two-part submission including a research essay exploring the economic downfall of the city, from an historic and modern day perspective, and a documentary-style photography collection taken after visiting the ancient city in China.

Nicolas Quejian, School of Architecture
Beijing & Shanghai, China; Kyoto & Tokyo, Japan
A People’s Urbanism

A collection of design workshops and people-focused urbanism research abroad including original photographs of manhole covers used as metaphors for the ways people permeate and take back their cities.

Jessica Perelman, Dornsife College of Letters, Arts & Sciences
Brisbane, Australia
Feeding dynamics, consumption rates and daily ration of wahoo (Acanthocybium solandri) in Australian waters

A research paper detailing the findings of a study to classify prey types consumed by wahoo, determine if an ontogenetic trophic shift occurs, analyze any relationship between feeding intensity and reproductive activity, and estimate an average consumption rate for various size classes.

Aubrey Rugo, Dornsife College of Letters, Arts & Sciences
Cape Town, South Africa
The Race for Africa: Technology MNCs (multinational corporations) Redefine the Approach to New Market Entry

A research report focusing on the needed variables for successful expansion into the African market for MNCs focusing on the demonstrated success of tech MNCs.

Martha Ryan, Keck School of Medicine
Delhi, India
Points of Intervention Between Aide et Action and Government of India in G.B. Road: An Autoethnographic Report

An analysis of opportunities for government and NGO intervention in the red light district of Delhi, India.